

The first Spanish participants are also coming to fore. Martín Romero and Marina Terrón, both from Granada, are enthusiastic about participating in “their” World Championship, and are training in a very well-known slope for them.

The Visera, classified as a black level slope, is an international reference and has hosted World Cup races. On the occasion of Sierra Nevada 2017, the slope has been remodelled to gain width and orientation. Located next to Sierra Nevada's radiotelescope, it has a gradient between 24 - 28 %, a length of 225 meters, and moguls are set 3.5 meters apart.
